INTRODUCTION

The Libyan Center for Freedom of the Press has launched The Falso platform to monitor hate speech and fake news⁽¹⁾. It is an independent digital research platform that works on media monitoring with the aim of educating the Libyan public about the situation of deep falsification practiced by many media outlets in social networks, the media plays a pivotal role in creating and steering events, and anyone who owns more sophisticated means, raises the ceiling of its impact on events positively or negatively, to the point of making the taste and culture of future individuals.

Since the outbreak of the violent conflict in Tripoli in April 2019⁽²⁾, media discourse in a number of media outlets has changed significantly, and the language of incitement and hate speech has been widely used, disrupting social peace, increasing the gap between the public and the media and causing loss of confidence in its means.

Crises have taken reality to a level of exceptional interaction that disrupts the means and tools of control and oversight that are based on ensuring a minimum balanced public service for the media community, which necessitates a careful reading of the situation of transformations caused by conflicts.

The Libyan Center for Freedom of the Press watched 15 Libyan media outlets, to monitor the media discourse, which is mostly biased to the parties of the armed conflict, and the accompanying significant decline of professionalism, the slide of media platforms to support armed parties and the implementation of propaganda advertisement, So that a new type of media was established that does not necessarily adhere to the ethics of the profession, derives its legitimacy from the tyranny and the injustice of systems, so this role has evolved with the many non-professional journalists and reporters having to practice over time, consequently, we are facing a media situation that has not been stable and has not been fully formed . Hence, the criteria for evaluating the experience differ according to contexts in a way that the circle of difference within one country may expand from another region according to ethnic, racial, ideological and regional divisions.

The most important and valuable weapon of the media to influence events is usually the ability to present a credible image even if it is not true news that earns you strength, our team has monitored 12,470 professional breaches, indicating the crude practices made by the media in covering the traumatic events of the war that the Libyans waged against each other with international support and instruction, and the increased hostilities through satellite channels and social networking sites, which reveals the extent of hostility and rivalry, lack of professionalism and the use of many methods to falsify facts to serve specific interests, Indeed, it “added fuel to the fire” in massing the Libyans to fight against each other. The media performance varies and takes a course according to the degree of conflict, and the narrower the spaces for the expression of the news and access from here, the higher the ceiling to depart from the professional ethics of the journalistic work, so that working with those ethics becomes absurd compared to the magnitude of the tragedy, and the coverage gradually slides, to become part of the scene of conflict and confrontation.

However, the positive thing about the matter is the increasing requests of the Libyan public to send press materials to the Falso platform team to verify them and uncover the facts, not to mention the gradual shift from quantitative monitoring to qualitative monitoring of these professional breaches.

METHODOLOGICAL FRAMEWORK

1. PROBLEMATIC OF THE STUDY ||

Scientific research is an essential activity of any society; In order to develop and plan for the future to find⁽¹⁾ sound solutions to the problems and phenomena that may hinder the growth and progress of societies, Through the organized investigation of these phenomena, and aims to attain knowledge that can be communicated and verified through scientific testing. In order to achieve this step, the researcher must define the subject of his study, or his research problem in an accurate and clear manner⁽²⁾. The problem of this study has been identified in a main question: What are the various types of professional violations that the surveyed Libyan media have committed, and how can they be treated professionally to avoid incitement, violence, hate speech and false news stories?

OVER THE COURSE OF THE first quarter of 2020, 5 monitors worked alongside Content and Publishing Manager on the quantitative monitoring of 15 media outlets 24 hours a day for their website and Facebook pages and controlling and monitoring professional breaches in all multi-media “photos, videos, written reports, news, etc”.

The result showed a significant increase in professional breaches, with 12,470 professional breaches documented, and that is considered as a very big number.

We have also been working closely to verify the rumors and false news that are trending on social media, and we have noticed the response and the great interaction from the Libyan public, which enhances the position of Falso platform as the first digital platform to monitor hate speech and fake news.

Given the high financial and human cost of quantitative monitoring, we have developed a research methodology based on qualitative news monitoring rather than quantitatively with a smaller team that can monitor and track 24 hours a day.

2. THE IMPORTANCE OF THE STUDY |

The importance of research or study is a major and essential element in any scientific research, and this study gains its importance from its concern with monitoring false news and hate speeches in the Libyan media during the study period, as it is among the recent studies that are exposed to monitoring these practices in the Libyan media.

The curriculum is defined as the set of mental procedures represented by the researcher in advance of the learning process that he will go through in order to reach the truth of the subject he is targeting.

In this study, we used the media survey method through the quantitative and qualitative method of monitoring the false news and inflammatory and hate speeches during the study period through a research methodology based on quantitative and qualitative monitoring to monitor the Libyan digital media based on global professional standards and ethical practices in media institutions, and the monitoring process was based on counting the number of repetitions of hate speech and armed conflicts in addition to the number of repetitions of professional breaches related to false or misleading news, where monitors fill the digital database consisting of several variables to become a database containing numbers and statistics that help calculate the ratios and the nature of violations.

ii. Classification of misleading news

Regarding the classification of professional violations related to misleading or false news, they are as follows:

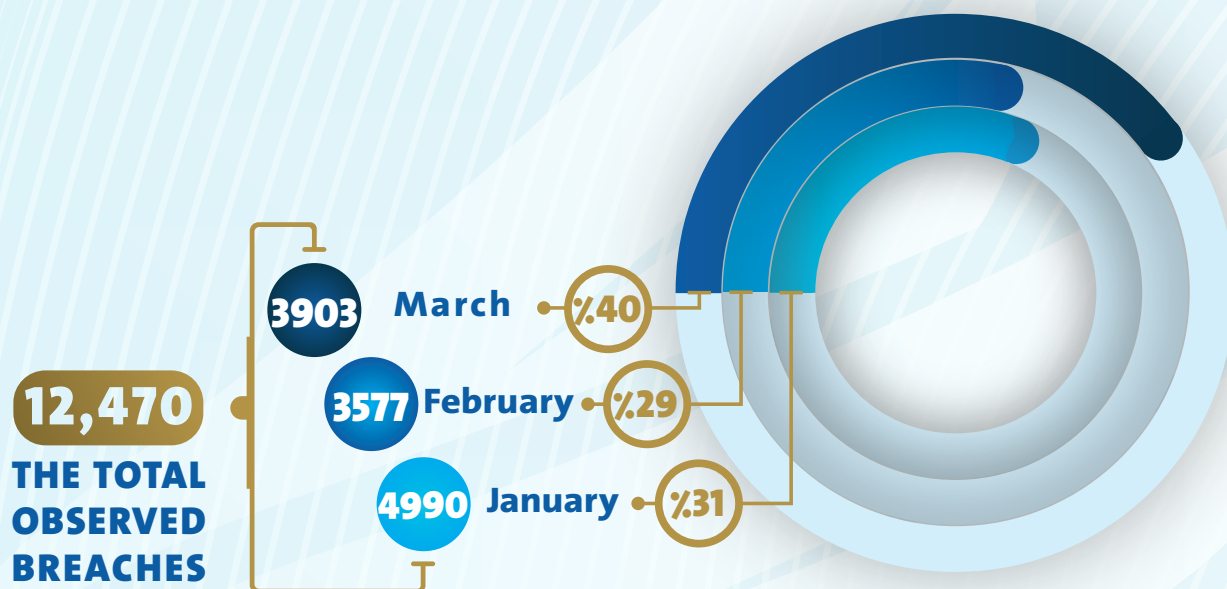

Detecting fake news is very easy by following simple steps to detect counterfeiting in the new media era, but we have to define the types of fake and false news, which are as follows:

- A. CONFUSION BETWEEN OPINION AND NEWS: It is the easiest to recognize it. It includes mentioning an event and giving more space to direct the reader with opinions that are not related to the news.
- B. ACCUSATIONS WITHOUT EVIDENCE: It is direct accusations against persons or groups and raising public opinion on them without any legal basis for these charges.
- C. MISLEADING OR BIASED NEWS: This is more difficult than its predecessor to judge. It contains a real part in most cases, such as a specific fact, event or even a quote, but all are taken from a specific context, and without this context their meaning differs completely. As for the biased news, it explains facts or real news, but from a biased point of view and clearly affiliated with a specific agenda.
- D. CLICKBAIT AND FALSE HEADLINES: These are surprising or shocking headlines that push you to click them for more information. They may be true or false, and most of them are used to mislead the reader.
- E. SPREADING RUMORS: It is an attempt to influence or distort the reputation of others by spreading false information that has nothing to do with the truth, and aims to pressure others or harm their psyche.
- F. FABRICATING IMAGES OR VIDEOS: It is a method that is used more frequently lately and it illustrates the case of deep faking through Photoshop for pictures or videos and showing an aura to mislead readers.

CONCLUSIONS

THE REASON BEHIND THE RISE IN HATE SPEECH ON SOME LIBYAN MEDIA SOCIAL NETWORKING SITES IS DUE TO A NUMBER OF FACTS, SOME OF WHICH ARE AS FOLLOWS:

1. Based on the indicators of quantitative and qualitative monitoring of the media materials, it shows that the media outlets played a negative role represented in the process of fuelling the state of political conflict between the various parties in the arena, and the failure to provide a healthy political, media and cultural environment for the political transition process, which calls for a comprehensive review of the media performance of the Libyan media
2. The absence of supervisory and legislative bodies to monitor these working methods that are not committed to the ethics of the profession, helped them to continue these violations and establish themselves as the one of the most professional.
3. Dependence of these media on publishing informative material that is not subject to professional standards of journalistic ethics. At the same time, it is also not compatible with the positive role that the media outlet is supposed to play nor the message assigned to it.
4. The editorial management of these institutions worked to direct their media materials and their guests by publishing political messages of a hate nature on the political and societal issues they address.
5. Libyan media have employed social media outlets badly in the political conflict at this stage to neutralize political opponents and root against them in order to incite public opinion against them, and to convert a large part of the published media material into material for political propaganda.
6. Most of the hate speech statements are related to political and personal incitement, insulting and abuse, by targeting their opponents from political topics and issues, and the majority of the axes around which hate speech revolved in the Libyan media.
